arobationary officer-th duties of which are to aid and bette persons unfortunate enough to ge locked up-Miss Ellot has given be time to improving the condition prisoners in the ten-day pens attached to the police courts. Recently she conceived the idea that if some person were to visit the courts of the leading European cities and see how probationary prisoners are dealt with in several other countries, many ideas and suggestions which might be valuable to New York courts would be picked up.

She decided she would make the trip herself. That frivolities might not in-terfere with her devoting all her time to studying on her trip across the ocean, Miss Ellot decided to eschew a passenger steamer and make the voy age in a freighter. To-day she salled from the foot of Houston street, North River, as the solitary passenger aboard the Mesaba, under especial chaperonage of the captain, who has become deeply interested in the young woman's mission.
